

FSU Center for Autism & Related Disabilities

College Survival 101

A five-week training series offered by CARD and FSU's School of Communication Science and Disorders

This training series is for college-bound high school seniors and college students. The focus of the class is on the executive functioning and social competencies needed to be successful in college. The academic and social aspects of memory, planning, organization, problem-solving, and reasoning will be addressed. Each participant will be paired with a social coach for the duration of the series.

FSU CARD is dedicated to providing individuals with autism or related disabilities, their families, and professionals who work with them, free consultation, resources, and educational support to build knowledge, confidence, infrastructure, and sustainability within the community.
